

FIND A FRIEND

1. Write down the five qualities of friendship that you think are most important in a good friend. Order from most to least important.
2. Move around the room and find someone who has written the same qualities (e.g. you both think 'listening' is the second most important quality). Write the person's name under that quality and carry on.
3. As you go around, you may see new qualities/words about friendship. Make a note of any new qualities you think are important in the sixth box.
